

THE ANDREW SHARPSHOOTERS. An army officer who accompanied the remains of Gen. Lauder to Salem spoke in the highest terms of the efficient and valuable services rendered by the Andrew Sharpshooters, and especially of their prominence in securing the safety of our troops during the skirmish at Edward's Ferry, of which the half has not been told. It is well known that, although they were always a favorite corps with Gen. Lauder, they were not held in much regard by the routine officers of the army until the skirmish alluded to proved the superiority of their skill in the use of their unusual but deadly rifles, and the ease with which so small a body kept at bay the rebel forces.

The detachment of this corps which formed the faithful body guard of the deceased General, from the place of his death to that of his interment, consisted of the following officers and men:

Captain. John Saunders of Salem.

Sergeants. 1st. John L. Perley of Georgetown; 2d. Henry Martin of Newburyport; 4th. Henry Jenkins of North Reading.

Corporals. Samuel Gilbrith of Belfast, Me.; George M. Coleman and A. W. Bartlett of Lynn; J. A. Burrows and D. N. Littlefield of Lowell.

Privates. J. N. Mugett of Lynn; O. H. Clement of Lowell; F. W. Bryant of Lexington; O. C. Shattuck of Lowell; E. Mattoon of Worcester; D. H. Temple of Marlborough; J. C. Orett of North Reading; Fred. White and Jerome Leavitt of Middleton; Jos. S. Ingalls of South Danvers; Charles A. Gardner of Salem; R. A. Vanmoll of Newburyport; H. E. Flint and D. W. Eaton of North Reading; J. Burkley and S. G. Campbell of Andover; J. P. Ambrose of Newburyport; and Warren Snow of Lynn.

Sergeant Jenkins is the man who shot the rebel that fired upon Capt. Saunders, and perhaps saved the Captain's life. He is sixty-one years old.

Private Shattuck is the marksman who shot the three rebel standard bearers as they stepped forward successively to uphold the flag of Treason.

Private Gardner has two sons in the service—one in Fort Jackson, and one on a gunboat of the Cairo fleet—and wishes he had more to offer to his country.

The four who were detailed for duty at the coffin in the church, and whose rigid and statue-like positions, at the head and foot of the corpse, produced so profound an impression upon all who looked upon that solemn tableau, were F. W. Bryant, G. M. Coleman, J. C. Orett and R. A. Vanmoll.

All the men of the detachment were given a furlough, after the funeral, to visit their families, and they all reported promptly to Capt. Saunders at the City Hall, yesterday, to return to camp. They marched to the depot and took the eleven o'clock train for Boston, and were cheered on the way, by a large crowd assembled to bid them God-speed.
